

Bomb: Investors would sue Elypsis for Friday's survey, and the K would charge a criminal complaint to investigate operators

The consultant Elypsis fired data that convulsed the market as much as politics last Friday by saying that, according to her studies, President Mauricio Macri was imposed on the candidate of the All Front for a point in the PASO. The news caused euphoria in the markets, and in the light of the results there are investors who lost millions. Now it could be prosecuted.

Elypsis is a consultancy founded by former macrista official Eduardo Levy Yeyati , and led by economist Luciano Cohan , and last Friday he ended up revolutionizing the market with data showing Mauricio Macri triumphing 38 to 37 over Alberto Fernández , a situation that the Sunday did not correspond at all with the terrible beating that the Peronist gave at the polls to the president.

That company was not the only one that granted data far from reality, but also the Brazilian bank BTG Pactual, while the Poliarquía and Isonomía brands risked suggesting a tie.

Anyway, in the market investors charge against Elypsis and as he slipped from his Twitter account the influential journalist Beto Valdez , in the city of Buenos Aires rumors circulate about possible demands for both the consultant and Cohan, but also later clarified that the former Undersecretary of Macroeconomic Programming of the Ministry of Finance of the Nation would have said that he is the victim of an operation against him.

The information slipped by Valdez has strength because several groups of investors lost huge fortunes with that move, and it seems they don't want to let it pass.

In a similar line, the portal On Line Policy published yesterday an information about the fact that within the Kirchner they are analyzing possible research requests for the market movements of last Friday where there were ruined investors and as contrara also there would be big winners .

Among those that the Kirchner looks suspiciously is Gabriel Martino , president of the HSBC and banker of maximum proximity to the Casa Rosada. In turn, the businessman maintains an old stalemate with the K, which took him even out of the country during the previous government when he was looked for by alleged sensitive issues related to money laundering.
